Stardate 46379.1. The Cardassians are finally withdrawing from Bajoran territory and the Deep Space Nine space station awaits its new Federation Commander, Benjamin Sisko. There is much to be done since the Cardassians looted the entire station. But Sisko brings ghosts of his own - the loss of his beloved wife to the Borg - and his inability to forgive Picard whom he sees only as Locutus. The discovery of a stable wormhole and the strange beings who inhabit it will force him to confront his past - and bring trouble from the Cardassians.

This opening episode draws on background from several Next Generation stories; Locutus and the Borg from Best Of Both Worlds (#174 & #175), the Bajorans from Ensign Ro (#203), and the Cardassians from Chain of Command (CIC 68B & CIC 69A).

47: One of his crew tells Gul Jasad of the Cardassian Seventh Order that the Fourth Order can arrive in a day as reinforcements. While in the wormhole, three separate close-ups of the monitor in the Rio Grande clearly show a button labelled "47" on the right-hand side. Just before O'Brien beamed Dax back to Ops after she was "escorted" out of the wormhole, he and Kira were checking out a monitor whose display was labelled "Scan Analysis 4077."
